Lacy Family Cemetery

John Lacy acquired 240 acres of Illinois land in 1855. A family cemetery was established within the holding's mid-section when the need arose.

The Lacy Cemetery is one-fourth mile north of Pinckneyville and one eighth mile west of Illinois Route 127, the cemetery lies on property now owned by Charles C. Lacy, a great grandson of the original title holder.

Four generations of Lacys are buried here. Headstones mark the graves of John and his son Henry Clay Lacy, both of whom were Civil War veterans. Because of few markers and a lack of records, the identity of others buried here remains unknown.

Hopewell Cemetery

Hopewell Cemetery is five miles west of Pinckneyville on Highway 154 and south on a side road to a hill covered with stately trees. The first burial date to before 1830. Some of the area's first settlers are buried here.

The Hopewell Cemetery Association was organized June 2, 1970, to maintain and preserve this cemetery.

Burial Site

Rex Franklin, a local historian from Vergennes, is convinced that there is a burial site containing six to eight graves on the north edge of Illinois Route 154, about a half mile west of the Hopewell Cemetery turnoff road.

It is marked only by a small clump of sapling trees at the edge of a field bordering on the right-of-way of Highway 154. A house once stood nearby (see the accompanying map) and is listed as the John Campbell farm in the 1853 Perry County Plat Book. Neighbors can remember a log house there in the first half of the twentieth century and it was sketched in charcoal by Roscoe Misselhorn, a noted local artist from Sparta, in 1942. Mr. and Mrs. John Campbell and one son are buried in nearby Hopewell Cemetery, but no one has any idea of who is buried in this cemetery. When the State of Illinois built Route 154 in the mid 1920's it brushed against the burial site, but since then the site has almost been forgotten.

Ernest Beck, an area resident over 90 years old, told his daughter Laverna Schwarz about the site, and Rex Franklin tried to verify the site in 1990.

Pinckneyville City Cemetery

Mr. Floyd Holder has allowed the Perry County Historical Society to copy his listing of the Pinckneyville City Cemetery.
